

Uranus in Taurus and Gemini in 2026

Uranus transits through a sign on an average of 7 years. Yet, it happens to be extra slow in Taurus, true to its slow but sure reputation. While all the far planets in any sign invariably synchronize with major changes, Uranus can prove especially strong, much like Pluto, yet more unpredictable and erratic.

Uranus and Pluto together constitute a dynamic evolutionary duo encompassing approximately 140-year cycles. The last time they were conjunct was 1965/66 and they will next align April 24, 2104, at 7 Taurus 36 as part of a tight 5 'planet' stellium including Sun, Moon and Venus. (It is a little strange to refer to such dates since a significantly new humanity will experience it, and the young people alive now will be elderly. It generally indicates a revolutionary movement to get closer to nature and the land as with agriculture.)

Not surprisingly, the current cycle is directly associated with the gender equality revolution that was sparked strong in the mid-sixties. Remember the women's liberation movement of that decade. I made a 3-part video series about it back in 2018, but it clearly still remains relevant. Here are the links to each part: Part 1 - Part 2 - Part 3

Uranus in 2026

Uranus in Taurus has been our reality since May 2018 and will be through to April 25, 2026! For many, it has been and continues to be a difficult transit, economically. Taurus is generally regarded as a challenging sign placement for Uranus, often manifesting as greed and clever schemes. Since that time, the world has and continues to undergo a significant shift of wealth, effectively making the very wealthy much wealthier and the poor even more so, while the prosperous middle class has largely paid the bill. Many will attest that this period has been tainted with fraud and grand theft at unprecedented levels and continues even now.

So, Uranus will then re-enter Gemini on April 25, 2026, where it will remain for its approximate 7-year cycle. So, we are still significantly under the influence of it in Taurus, the sign of foundations, until then. Yet, when Uranus re-enters Gemini, a follow-through process associated with the revolutionary internet era will really begin.

It will include the next major implementation of AI and a major shift from fiat currencies to digital economies, along with robotics and the 'internet of things' in general, affecting every area of our social lives and, invariably, that of our economic realities as well.

By the time Uranus enters Cancer for its full transit cycle of about 7 years, which begins in early May 2033, the world will have changed significantly due to Uranus' transit through Gemini to the extent that what we consider normal today will be all but forgotten and a rapidly fading memory.

So, get ready for Uranus in Gemini as it makes its debut in Summer 2026.
